THE CONSTITUTION,
Atlanta, Ga.

ATLANTA, GA., DECEMBER 22, 1881.

SENATOR RIDDLEBERGER smiles at the door-keeper.

A cry of distress from reached civilization from Bennett's Arctic crew.

CONGRESS has adjourned until the fifth of January.

ANOTHER bank official has confessed in New Jersey. Wall street did it.

The Florida land company has sold two million acres of its recent purchase to an English company of capitalists. It is said that immediate steps will be taken to settle and develop the territory sold.

FLORIDA is rapidly developing. A dredge is being taken up the Catoosahatchee to Lake Hickapocoochee to make connection with Lake Okechoobee. The next progressive step should be to abolish the manes.

SPEAKER KEIFER did a very accommodating thing when he gave Robeson the chairmanship of the naval expenditures committee. The gentleman from New Jersey can now destroy all the evidences of his corruption while secretary of the navy department.

The speaker on yesterday announced the composition of the house committees. Mr. Spear has been placed on the committee on ways and means. Mr. Blount, who ferreted out and exposed the star route swindle, has been dropped from the committee on appropriations.

The new postmaster general, Timothy O. Howe, is one of the old guard who stood by "the old soldier," with never a doubt of his loyalty. He is a native of Maine, where he was educated, went to the bar and attained a seat in the legislature in 1845, resigned and moved to Wisconsin the same year. He was a supreme judge in the latter state five years, and held a seat in the United States senate three full terms, eighteen years. He is old, 64 next February; a shrewd political manager, a keen book lawyer, who never has been suspected of knowing anything else or caring for anybody but himself. His son-in-law, Colonel Totten, is one of the chief counsel for the star route defendants. Howe is thoroughly disliked by the more liberal members of his own party.

The effort that is being made from Washington to prove the president's patriotism from the fact that while he appointed the stalwart Howe to the head of the postal department, he at the same time carried out one of Mr. Garfield's intentions by placing Judge Gray on the supreme bench, will not bear close inspection. It is noticeable that the appointments given Garfield men are of a character which carry with them only a little dignity, while stalwarts are always placed where they can do the most good in taking care of the boys. Thus Judge Gray can nod as long as he pleases on the supreme bench, while Howe is taking care of the patronage of a department the operations of which reach every hamlet of the union. And let it be remembered also that Postmaster-General Howe is the father-in-law of Colonel Totten, chief counsel for the star route thieves, and that the privileges of a son by marriage are many and peculiar.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE HORACE GRAY, who fills the vacancy on the supreme bench made vacant by the death of Associate Justice Clifford, has been for several years, chief justice of the superior judicial court, of Massachusetts. He is now fifty-two years old, having taken excellent care of a naturally strong constitution, and has probably twenty years of vigorous work in him. Yet Justice Gray belongs to a distinguished Massachusetts family, and from early life shaped his studies with special reference to fitting himself for discharging the duties of a judge. He is distinguished for great legal learning and for extraordinary analytical power, which enables him to set forth clearly the important considerations affecting the most intricate cases that have been tried before him. It is generally believed that if the late President Garfield had lived that he would have appointed Justice Gray to the position in which President Arthur has just placed him.

RALLYING TO THE EX-PRESIDENT.

The best friends of ex-President Davis could not have devised a happier method for bringing back to that illustrious man the wandering affections of his people, and uniting in his defense all the ex-confederate factions, than the publication of the interview of General Joseph E. Johnston.

Under the continued criminalization and recrimination of the past twenty years, the adherents of other leaders have been put in antagonism to Mr. Davis. The implied charges in General Johnston's interview strike down these antagonisms and tend to rally to Mr. Davis's defense every man who fought under the stars and bars, or loved the lost cause. It is doubtful if ever since the war the ex-president has been as popular as he is to-day, or if ever so many warm things have been said in his behalf as during the present week.

Whether General Johnston so intended it or not, the plain implication of his statement is that there was something sinister in Mr. Davis's handling of the treasure of the confederacy. This implication is so monstrous that there is an instinctive sympathy for his victim all over the country, and indignation against its author. General Johnston states that he had agreed with Mr. Burr that his view should be submitted to him and published, and that it was published in this revision. As, however, he distinctly reiterates the facts contained in the interview and does not disavow the implication the whole press has put upon his statements, he proposes to be held responsible for it. It is a sad piece of business, from what ever light we view it, and we hope it will soon be effectually and finally disposed of.

TARIFF REVISION.

Everybody, not excepting the manufacturers of New England, is ready to say that the tariff should be revised. Everybody is ready to declare that it is inequitable, unjust, unequal, oppressive and all that—a bundle, in Senator Voorhees's words, of jobs and monopolies. But beyond this point there is no agreement. The monopolists want no action, no inquiry, no debate. The people who are burdened with taxes that go in largest part into the pockets of a few manufacturers, want immediate action. Congress is the umpire.

There are two bills before the senate finance committee on the subject, both favoring a commission to investigate the subject. The Garland bill calls for a commission of three senators, three representatives and three experts from civil life—the last named three to be selected by the congressional members—with instructions to report in the course of ninety days, or before the session is terminated. The Morrill proposition looks to a commission of fifteen civilians, to be appointed by the president and to be instructed to report in January, 1883. The finance committee of the senate has decided to favorably report the Morrill bill without amendment, and to pitch the Garland bill overboard.

In fact, there is not much difference between the two bills, except in relation to time. Either of the proposed commissions would be packed in the interests of the protectionists. The president is a high-tariff man, and both houses are organized in the interest of the manufacturers. Neither of the proposed commissions would accomplish any more than resist in an agitation of the subject and consequent exposure of the almost numberless inequities of the present tariff. In that respect the Garland bill is the best, because the agitation would come sooner, and there might be a chance to strike out some of the most glaring jobs before this congress is dissolved. The Morrill bill is simply an audacious attempt to do nothing; for it does not provide for any report whatever until this congress is nearing dissolution, and every hour is needed to perfect appropriation bills and other imperative legislation. It is an attempt to pave the way for another commission and indefinite postponement.

The truth is, the commission plan is a fraud, a device of the monopolists in the interest of delay. The work of preparing a tariff-reform bill should be done by the ways and means committee of the house, and not by any senate committee or any commission. The subject needs no investigation; it is thoroughly understood by hundreds of people; has been studied and investigated and discussed until every point has been brought out; and the ways and means committee can prepare in a week, from facts and past bills and other sources of ready information, a bill that will form a good basis for congressional action. The most flagrant jobs in the tariff are well known, and beyond these a lopping off of items that yield no revenue and a general reduction would go far toward relieving the people from taxes that cripple the shipping interest, oppress the consumer, and fill the country with palaces and paupers.

The estimated Courier-Journal has some comment—on, rather, we should say, strictures—on Mr. Blaine's note of instructions to Minister Lowell which seem to us to be based on a misconception of that document. If there is no misconception, then the esteemed Courier-Journal is inclined to take a very narrow view of what should constitute American policy in relation to the de Lesseps canal project. In THE CONSTITUTION of yesterday we gave a summary of the instructions given to Mr. Lowell by Mr. Blaine. It is only necessary to refer to this summary to understand the scope of the following from the Courier-Journal:

The claim of our government now is not based on the Monroe doctrine, so called, or any other doctrine. Monroe said that our government would not be indifferent to the extension of European political systems on either continent for the purpose of "oppressing" the Spanish-American republics, and that, of course, meant that we would oppose European invasion of European colonies for the purpose of acquiring territory in either country. By threatening to seize and control any canal built across Central America or the state of Panama, which is intended for the use of the maritime nations of the world, our government cannot expect the acquiescence of the European maritime powers. Europe is perfectly content with the guarantee of the neutrality of any canal constructed through the straits of Columbia, which our government gave in the treaty of 1846, and that is sufficient. In that treaty our government also guaranteed the sovereignty of the republics, and then, in denying Colombia the right to exercise any control over the Lesseps canal, or to secure other guarantees of neutrality besides that of our government, we deny the very sovereignty we agreed in 1846 to maintain. The doctrine advanced by Blaine embodies insistent interference with the rights of our Spanish-American neighbors. The legitimate way for our government to control an isthmian canal is to purchase a controlling amount of stock, as Great Britain did with reference to the Suez canal. Any attempt to secure control in any other way is a plain case of encroachment which will assuredly get us into trouble.

The question involved here cannot be fairly discussed from a sectional, anti-Blaine, or an anti-republican standpoint. It is a matter that should be regarded from the standpoint of an American. Leaving out of view, therefore, all provincial and angular prejudices—the growth of differences that are probably not as important to the country as we have persuaded ourselves to believe—it is not difficult to see that Mr. Blaine's note to Minister Lowell is nothing more than the formulation of American sentiment. It is true the claim of our government is not based on the Monroe doctrine, or on any other doctrine. It is simply an expression of American opinion—a modest but firm assertion of a policy to which the republic must inevitably be committed. That Mr. Blaine happens to see this is no doubt a very good thing for Mr. Blaine, but the policy itself is the outgrowth of circumstances over which Mr. Blaine has had no sort of control. It is merely his good fortune to be able to give this policy clear and forcible expression.

We do not understand, as the esteemed Courier-Journal suggests, that this policy involves a threat to "seize and control" any canal built across Central America, or the state of Panama. Our government has no desire or purpose to seize the canal, and no intention, as the Courier-Journal appears to believe, of organizing a buccaneering expedition to that end; nor does Mr. Blaine's note imply any such intention or desire. The American policy, of which Mr. Blaine gives such a clear interpretation, is to reserve the right to ultimately control the canal—to control it in the interests of our own government when such a contingency arises. To our minds, this is neither a threat to seize the canal nor a denial of the sovereignty of the republic of Colombia.

The canal is a very small affair compared with its results. It is the practical control of these results to which Mr. Blaine refers, and not to any practical control of the canal itself. The republic is a much more important affair in 1881 than it was in 1846, and this growth of importance necessitates a foreign policy more or less active. When, therefore, Mr. Blaine announces that the United States do not propose to allow other powers to make the canal a channel of brigandage, or to use it as a means of destroying the influence of our own government, he merely claims for this country the position to which it is entitled by reason of its present importance.

The American policy, as formulated by Mr. Blaine, is the strongest possible guarantee of neutrality that could be given. We have no doubt that England will view it in this light. It is a policy which England has never hesitated to make her own, and she will doubtless be quick to recognize the justice and necessity upon which it is based.

The lamented Foster, of Ohio, continues to sit up with the present administration. It is a wonder the man doesn't feel chilly.

HAVING loaned Mr. Lowell for an epistolary duel with the Hon. Jno. Bull, Mr. Blaine may very properly plume himself on the fact that he has placed another flea in Grant's ear.

We endeavored to explain the other day that glucose was syntactically used in sugar. The word, however, was carefully printed "symptomatically." We have decided to enter our proof-reading attachment for competition at the exposition. The time is short, but the prize is ours.

The magnificent display of typographical errors in our columns during the past several days was instituted to show visiting editors just what our facilities are in this direction. Atlanta is always ahead.

THERE is no doubt that the Grant infection, which is a chronic complaint so far as the present administration is concerned, will find an early cure for belittling Mr. Blaine's foreign policy; and yet, in spite of this, that policy will be the American policy. Mr. Whatumaycallemhusen would do well to remember this.

The recent investigation of the conduct of the Ninth Massachusetts regiment has resulted in the expulsion of twenty members. The moral health of the organization will be greatly improved by this simple remedy.

EDITOR SIDNEY LEWIS, of the Sparta Ishmaelite, visited the exposition Tuesday, and also called upon THE CONSTITUTION. We trust he enjoyed his visit; we feel sure he would have enjoyed it had he remained long enough to feel of the Georgian pulse of the city, which beats constantly and firmly beneath every symptom of progress and prosperity to be seen here.

The Ishmaelite is an engaging quantity in journalism, and its editor is just as engaging personally. He has something more than a mere knack with a pen; he is one of the originals, and his thoughts are always worthy of attention. We mention these things now because the probability is that our usual controversy with Editor Lewis will be renewed before the week is out.

The republican leaders in this section are asking themselves why they should waste their ability in building up an independent section of the democratic party. They carefully trained ear can already detect symptoms of a scuffle in the vegetable garden.

LOGAN's efforts to have General Grant placed on the retired list of the army, are merely part of a deep-laid scheme to raise another $250,000 for our great object of National Charity. We have no doubt that Mr. George Jones would be willing to take charge of a new subscription list. Logan's diplomacy is too clumsy to conceal his purpose.

It is charged that bar-rooms in Texas are closed six hours every Sunday. This is a very small war of, but it is big enough to form the nucleus of a reform movement.

It is understood that preparations for a Mahone movement in Georgia are slowly taking shape. There seems to be a purpose on the part of those having it in charge to ignore Colonel Marcellus Thornton. But in the meantime suppose that Colonel Thornton refuses to be ignored?

The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer is somehow impressed with the idea that the reported interview between Mr. Burr and General Johnston is bogus. The correspondent is mistaken. The report has been carefully prepared and elaborated, and we have no doubt it is in precisely the shape General Johnston desired it to appear.

The republicans are pointing the independents to Mahone; but can the Georgia independents afford to follow Mahone into the republican organization? We shall see.

The republican conundrum, since the result of Mahoneism in Virginia, is of this size and shape: "What does it profit us to encourage the success of independents who are merely independent demagogues?" There will be a showing of hands presently, and then we will see what gem proposes to go through a cotton gin to this new racket.

MR. HENRY WATERBURY, of the Courier-Journal, writing of Guitreau, says: "He is no more crazy than I am!" Does this admission give Guitreau about all he claims?

The Augusta News ought to know that the people of Atlanta are not looking for "small-pox to break out any moment." There is not and has not been a case of small-pox south of Cincinnati or Louisville, and there may never be, Atlanta is in no more danger of small-pox than Augusta, Savannah or Montgomery. Indeed, since she has taken the precautions advised by THE CONSTITUTION, she is in very much less danger than any city that has not done likewise.

It is thought that consultations are now going on in which the Georgia independent leaders have a large interest. It is also thought that these consultations are located at the breach with an ultimatum.

We want to warn everybody concerned, that the season for dragging Georgia into the republican party by the foot of her jeans and trousers and the scruff of her swanlike neck has not yet arrived.

THERE died recently in Leipzig a rich widow whose only relative was very distant. After making a bequest for the minor, and among them one of 150,000 marks to the city for the erection of a monumental structure, she bequeathed the residue of her fortune to the city, to be used for the benefit of the poor. She directed that the interest on the money should be used in assisting such poor children as are not already benefited by public charities.

We have news of the burial of the eastern empress of China, whose death took place several months ago. The funeral was a magnificent one, the time and place of burial of a member of the imperial family, for an undecayed selection is made a stream of lacquer flows down the river. Rather than take any risk in such an important matter the body was carried down the river in a small boat, and a Chinaman of high rank will be in charge of the funeral.

NOT only at Balmoral, but also at Osborne and at Windsor castle, the suites of rooms which were occupied by the Prince Consort, have never since his death been again occupied. The rooms remain the same as he left it. The rooms are kept locked up during the absence of the court, but as Queen Victoria comes to each palace, they are opened and lighted up every evening during her stay. At Windsor she usually passes a part of each evening in the Prince Consort's study.

In last year's racing in England Archer heads the list of winning jockeys, scoring 219 wins. This number falls short of his extraordinary record of 1878, when he won 242 races. WHILE Sarah Bernhardt was, for the purposes of her art, watching the dying of a hospital patient, she was, in her private life, watching the dying of a woman. The woman was seized with terror, and exclaimed: "All I know is, you are the angel of death; you came the other night; you are my neighbor; become, terrible specter!" Then she died, and Sarah faded away at the foot of the bed. This story is going round in the papers, and serves to confirm the report that Sarah intends to make another theatrical tour through this country.

It is reported in Washington that Mrs. Garfield has frequently spoken of one feature above all others in the president's treatment that she regretted most. That was the fact that the president was never allowed to know about the danger of death, or to speak as he would have done had he been allowed to think that he was going to die. When she broached this subject he was silent in his talking and diverted from it by admonitions not to lose courage. Mrs. Garfield says that she never dared to talk to the president about matters about which it was most imperative that there should be conversation before he died, but she said, and the president passed away without her having that opportunity.

A PAIR IN THE SENATE.

Washington Critic.

A noise like unto a clap of thunder was heard in the senate chamber, Davis, of West Virginia, springing to his feet in amazement. Hoar trembled and yet laughed. Beck looked as though he had heard that noise before, and turned his head toward the democratic cloak-room and behind ex-senator Allen S. Thurman with his old bandana in one hand and a gold snuff-box in the other. Beck told Davis not to be alarmed, it was nothing but Thurman blowing his nose. And the senate proceeded to business.

In the columns side by side, Stand the captives, Married, Died, What fine irony in this! That shades with death our nuptial bliss, That blends beneath our earnest gaze, The story of death and our earnest gaze, The kiss of death, of blushing bride, Sarcastic blend in—Married, Died.

Orange blossoms, ripened wheat, Sprigs of rose or lilies sweet, Circling of old orlocks of snow, Wedding robes or garb of woe, Hands in loving hands to rest, Or folded like on pulchrest breast, Who shall bloom and fruit divide, So near the stories, Married, Died.

A TERRIBLE RAILROAD ACCIDENT. CHICAGO, December 21.—As an engine and pay car of the Northwestern railroad were nearing the bridge across the north branch of the Chicago river, near Fullerton avenue, to-day, the bridge swung open suddenly and before the engine could be stopped it plunged with its tender into the filthy water. The pay car barely escaped by striking the bridge piers and began to swing back.

The bridge was badly wrecked. J. M. Leavitt, fireman, jumped from the engine and swam out. Engineer W. C. Wilson was pulled out with his left arm off below the knee. The conductor was crushed to death between the engine and tender and his body is still under water. Thick smoke and odor from neighboring factories prevented the signals being seen or heard by the bridge tender and railroad men.

A MISSOURI BRIDE. ST. LOUIS, December 21.—George Mills attempted to commit suicide on a highway at the highway at Hannibal. He presented a revolver at the lady who grasped it and a scuffle ensued, during which the revolver was discharged, and the lady was part of one of Mrs. Fink's fingers. Mrs. Fink's screams frightened the ruffian who ran off. On arriving at home she told her husband of the deed, and he thereupon broke down the door and discovered the overpowered Mills with difficulty. The captors saved him from lynching, but he was afterwards handed over to the authorities. Mills is a hard case.

THE LOST JEANNETTE.

A TERRIBLE STORY FROM THE NORTHERN SEAS.

The Herald Exploring Ship Jeannette Heard From in an Unexpected Quarter. The Vessel Stranded Between the Ice and Land—Separation of the Crew—Tidings From Survivors.

WASHINGTON, December 21.—Secretary of State, Frelinghuysen received yesterday the following telegram from the charge d'affaires of the United States at St. Petersburg:

Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.: The Jeannette was crushed in the ice June 11th, in latitude 77, longitude 157. The crew embarked in three boats and were separated by wind and fog. No. 3, with eleven men, Engineer Melville commanding, reached the mouth of the Lena, September 17th. Subsequently No. 1, with Captain DeLong, Dr. Ambler and thirteen men, reached the Lena in a pitiable condition. Prompt assistance has been sent. No. 2 has not been heard from.

Hoffman, St. Petersburg.

In response to the above, the following was transmitted:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, December 20.—Hoffman, Charge, St. Petersburg: Tender the hearty thanks of the president to all authorities or persons who have in any way been instrumental in assisting the unfortunate survivors from the Jeannette, or furnishing information to this government.

Secretary of State.

MEVILLE'S TELEGRAMS.

ST. PETERSBURG, December 21.—A special supplement of the Official Gazette, issued this evening, announces that all telegrams from Engineer Melville, of the lost Arctic exploring steamer Jeannette, will be forwarded to their destinations as promptly as possible, and the most energetic measures be taken for the discovery of the remainder of the crew of the Jeannette, and those left on the ice at the mouth of Lena river.

Engineer Melville has forwarded by natives long dispatches to Mr. Bennett, of the New York Herald. For want of funds they have been forwarded by post, addressed to General Ignatieff. On October 23, Niderman and Noras, seamen, who were on boat No. 1, joined their comrades, and stated that Lieutenant DeLong, Doctor Ambler and twelve others, had reached the northern mouth of the Lena, and were starving. An expedition was at once sent out to rescue them. The survivors lost everything. Engineer Melville says money is urgently needed and should be sent by telegram to Jakutsk. He has urgently requested that six thousand roubles be transmitted immediately to the government of Jakutsk for the return and care of the shipwrecked men.

THE FIRST NEWS.

LONDON, December 21.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says: News reached the government at Jakutsk, eastern Siberia, that September 14th, three natives of Oulouster, near Cape Barhay, 140 versts north of Cape Behoff, discovered a boat containing eleven men, who stated they belonged to the Jeannette and had undergone terrible suffering. On hearing the news the district deputy governor, with a doctor and medicines, was immediately dispatched to help the shipwrecked sailors, and was instructed to bring them to Jakutsk. The governor was also instructed to do everything in his power to recover the remainder of the crew, 50 roubles being given for the purpose. Engineer Melville has telegraphed the American legation at St. Petersburg that the Jeannette was surrounded and crushed by ice June 22 in latitude 77 north, longitude 157 east. The crew left the vessel in three boats. About fifty miles from the mouth of the Lena they were separated by violent winds and thick fogs. Boat No. 3, commanded by Engineer Melville, arrived September 29 at the eastern mouth of the river Lena, where it was stopped by blocks of ice, near the village of Holenogay, inhabited by Idolators. Boat No. 1 returned the same spot, and the Idolators, who were hostile to the crew, were driven off. The Idolators state that Lieutenant DeLong and Dr. Ambler, with twelve others, landed at the northern mouth of the Lena, and after a short stay, in a condition, suffering from frost-bitten limbs. A party of the inhabitants of Holenogay started immediately to their assistance. Nothing is known of boat No. 2.

THE RIVER LENA.

WASHINGTON, December 21.—George Kennan, of this city, who sailed a thousand miles or more, up the river Lena, at the mouth of which Lieutenant DeLong and the survivors of the crew of the Arctic steamer Jeannette were stranded, says that where the Jeannette was lost is 150 miles northeast of the island of New Siberia, 200 miles from the nearest point of land, and a little more than 500 miles from the mouth of the Lena. It is probable that Lieutenant DeLong, with the remainder of the crew, made for the nearest point on the Siberian coast, passing to the eastward and southward of New Siberia Island, and reaching the main land between the mouth of the Indigirka and the mouth of the Lena. If he reached the coast early enough, in the summer, he could have found Russian and native fishing stations at the mouth of the Syrena, Indigirka and other smaller streams, which fall into the Arctic sea in that vicinity, and thus have obtained succor much nearer than Lena. It is possible, however, that he did not reach the main land until after the fishing season had been abandoned, and the fishermen had retreated up the river to the winter villages, which are a mile or so situated some distance inland. At the mouth of the Lena, there is, I believe, a permanent settlement, and this seems to have been the place to which the crew made for. If the third boat failed to reach the rendezvous agreed upon, the Jeannette crew by no means follows the coast, but may have found an inhabited station nearer than the mouth of the Lena, or been picked by a foreign or native fishing boat, and carried or guided to some other place of safety. In such case, they might not be heard from until a month or more after the arrival of the other boats. The third boat crew should not give up as yet, but we have heard from the Jeannette crew along the Yana and Lena rivers, from Nizhni Kolyma, which, as a place of refuge, was quite near and accessible at the mouth of the Lena. The retreat of the Jeannette crew from the ice encountered Arctic sea to the Siberian mainland is a remarkable achievement, and one which is paralleled in Arctic history only by the retreat of Farinelli and his men from the northern extremity of the ice of Zakharia and of the crew of the Jeannette from the ice of Land. The fact that DeLong and his men were three months at sea and on the ice in open boats before they reached the mouth of the Lena, is a fact which of itself tells a mournful story of hardship and suffering, and which more than accounts for the pitiable condition in which they were told DeLong's crew at last arrived. The Jeannette's crew will be well cared for at the Lena settlement. On the whole Siberian coast they would find warm earth and shelter, and the crew were strong enough to travel, they would probably be brought up the Lena on dog sledges to Yakutsk, which is a large Russian town of 6,000 or 8,000 inhabitants.

Here they would have all the comforts and many of the luxuries of home, and the government of the sea coast province would furnish them with transportation either across the Stanovo mountains to Olenok, or across the Lena by boat for by one of the vessels of our Pacific squadron or on the Lena to Irkutsk and thence overland to St. Petersburg. They will have no serious difficulty in getting home from the mouth of the Lena. The journey up the river from the Arctic coast to the Lena settlement is a hard one, on account of the great severity of the climate in that part of Siberia, but it ought not to occupy more than a month and a half, and is not attended with any danger to men of fair powers of endurance. It is in some respects an easier journey than that from Nizhni Kolyma to Yakutsk, which is performed by Russian traders every winter. The news received today was brought from the mouth of the Lena by a special messenger up the river to Yakutsk on dog sledges, and with relay teams of reindeer and horses, and eastern Siberia, and thence by telegraph to St. Petersburg. The news has been fully two months, and, perhaps, more, getting to the mouth of the Lena to Irkutsk, and it is then possible that the next information we get will be that of the arrival of the shipwrecked crew at Yakutsk. The government of the sea coast province at Yakutsk is a man of cultivation and enlightenment, and if I mistake not, a member of the Siberian branch of the Imperial geographical society.

The following was sent this afternoon to Mr. Hoffman, at St. Petersburg:

The president desires you to make provision for the immediate relief and return of the officers and men of the Jeannette. Cable promptly the amount of credit you require and it will be provided by the secretary of the navy and cable. Also cable what steps can be taken by this government for the recovery of the crew of the missing boat.

CHRISTMAS TREES AND FESTIVITIES.

The Constitution is preparing for its Sunday supplement a full list of the festivities for Christmas day and week.

We shall be obliged if those in charge of the various Christmas trees, dinner, donation parties, etc., will send in to this office a report of what they will do during to-day. All items intended for the society columns of THE SUNDAY CONSTITUTION, to be properly classified, must be in this office by Friday noon.

THE SEVEN WONDERS.

Crosby's Big Attractions at the Exposition.

Crosby's seven wonders still attract a large crowd, and by the recent acquisitions has become one of the most interesting features at the exposition. Madame Helen, the lady who with fearless hands places the monster snake around her body, is one of the purest type of her race, and is justly admired by the thousands who visit the show. The fat boy, who is 18 years of age, and who weighs 250 pounds, is one of the big fellows. His smile is always pleasant and he never fails to captivate his audience. Professor Gule, the German magician, is as much at home when pulling a hoop-shirt out of your ear as when cooking an egg therein, and Archer, the ventriloquist, never fails to please. Delaine, the fire king, and his wife, are big features. They do all manner of tricks with fire and are never at a loss with the fiery element. They eat, drink, and handle the melted iron and lead with an astonishing ease, and their work is simply immense.

The big attraction under the canvas in the seven wonders. The Sutherland family is composed of seven sisters, whose striking resemblance is apparent to all. Their hair is massive and lengthy, and upon the head of Victoria is seven feet long. Don't you forget that this is the show at the exposition.

Atlanta's First Drummer.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: I want to tell the readers of THE CONSTITUTION as well as all the merchants and business men of Atlanta, that the well known firm of Sisson & Bro., Dahlonga, Ga., was the first drummer who left Atlanta with a package of samples. We may very properly say that he started the wholesale trade of Atlanta. Mr. Sisson was salesman in the clothing house of Herring & Son at the time he made up his mind that traveling with samples of "drumming" would pay. He packed his trunk with samples, and in 1860 made a start for Stone Mountain, from that place to Lawrenceville, next to Gainesville, then to Cleveland and Dahlonga, making satisfactory sales at all of the above named places. After this first trip he went on as a drummer for quite awhile traveling over the railroads and elsewhere. I hope that this first drummer may continue prosperous and that he may live to see Atlanta with a hundred thousand inhabitants. ROMEO.

Scaling #5.

Last night messenger from No. 112 Pryor street last night entered police headquarters and asked for an officer. Captain Couch was present and dispatched Officer Spear to the place. In a short while returned, bringing with him Maggie Carroll, a colored woman, who he preferred the charge of larceny. It seems that she yesterday took occasion to pilfer the bureau drawers, from which she took in money, and which was found in her possession.

Adjourned Temperance Meeting.

From the Judges' building to-day the temperance meeting will adjourn to the house of representatives, with a doctor and medicines, was immediately dispatched to help the shipwrecked sailors, and was instructed to bring them to Jakutsk.

Public cordially invited.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

The E. Jaccard Jewelry Company, of St. Louis, has on exhibition and for sale at the exposition in Art hall the most beautiful collection of Gems, Diamond and Gem Jewelry, Watches, Repousse Silver work, Bisque Ornaments, Real Bronzes, Japanese Curios, etc., that has ever been seen in the south. These goods are offered for sale here by this old house, which was founded in 1829, at the same prices as are charged by them in St. Louis. This is an opportunity to all who are contemplating the purchase of wedding, birthday, christening, anniversary or holiday gifts to procure them upon the most favorable terms. In addition to the above, orders will be received for wedding cards and invitations, Christmas cards, menus, ball programmes, etc., which are executed by the Jaccard Jewelry Company in the most correct style.

Silver Plated Ware.

The display of silver plated ware, art and industrial building, made by Messrs. Charles W. Hamill & Co., Baltimore, Maryland, is like a silver mine. It is of the highest quality. All orders sent to the factory will receive prompt attention. The ware in the case will be delivered after the close of the exposition. Souvenir of the exposition triple plated cup gold lined.

First Baptist Sunday-School Festival.

The ladies and contributors to the festival of the Sunday school of the First Baptist church, please have all contributions on hand at the church by noon on Thursday, December 22, when those in charge will receive them.

Atlanta's First Drummer.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: I want to tell the readers of THE CONSTITUTION as well as all the merchants and business men of Atlanta, that the well known firm of Sisson & Bro., Dahlonga, Ga., was the first drummer who left Atlanta with a package of samples.

We may very properly say that he started the wholesale trade of Atlanta. Mr. Sisson was salesman in the clothing house of Herring & Son at the time he made up his mind that traveling with samples of "drumming" would pay.

He packed his trunk with samples, and in 1860 made a start for Stone Mountain, from that place to Lawrenceville, next to Gainesville, then to Cleveland and Dahlonga, making satisfactory sales at all of the above named places.

After this first trip he went on as a drummer for quite awhile traveling over the railroads and elsewhere. I hope that this first drummer may continue prosperous and that he may live to see Atlanta with a hundred thousand inhabitants.

HYMNAL.

BECK—BAILLY—Marron in the light of the 13th inst., by Rev. B. F. Fennet, Mr. Eugene W. Beck, formerly of Rahuney, now of Milton, to Miss Ella Bailey, daughter of Dr. S. S. Bailey, of Milton county.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst, our beloved and classmate, Miss Lizzie Goldenstein; and whereas, as we stand around the remains of our dear sister in Christ, with tearful eyes beholding her lovely form for the last time on this earth;

Resolved 1. That we bow our humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, knowing that though our hearts bleed as ponder our great loss, to our beloved sister as she "asleep in Jesus," it is all "gain;" for now she with Jesus, freed from each's sorrow and sorrow, king in the love and sunshine of her Saviour.

Resolved 2. That in the case of Miss Lizzie Goldenstein, our church and Sunday school have lost one of her brightest and most lovely jewels, that her sunny, sweet and cheerful Christian walk in life, is deeply imprinted upon every one that knew her, and at her kind, amiable and quiet disposition her every heart, and though our sorrow and grief are great and deep, yet we rejoice in the knowledge that our dear Lizzie is now with Christ, which is better, singing loud hallicujahs to the Lord that was slain.

That we deeply sympathize with the bereaved parents; that we pray Heavenly Father to give them the grace of holy spirit and the consolation of his holy word cheer their stricken hearts in this their hour of grief and distress, so that they may feel and see that it was a kind and a loving Father's hand that took their darling home to be forever with Him; if at rest, waiting at the heavenly gates for them to meet her by and by. And in conclusion, we pray God will sanctify to us all this heavy affliction, so that we all may say, yes, from the depths of our hearts, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

Resolved 3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family published in THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION.

WHAT THE PEOPLE ARE DOING, SAYING AND THINKING.

Particulars of the suicide of Judge Welch, of New York, a busy life, thrown out of employment, finds rest in self-destruction—Two Negro Children Burned to Death.

By Mail and Wire to the Constitution.
New York, December 21.—On yesterday morning our citizens were startled by the report that Judge J. A. Welch had committed suicide. That a man of his age and standing and in his circumstances should end his life by his own hand could not be credited until investigation proved the news to be too true. Yesterday morning Judge Welch rose early, as was his custom, and went to his study in a little while took his breakfast, in which he kept his accounts, and walked out of the house. In a short time Mrs. Welch went to the back door and called him to come in and hold family prayer, but saw nothing of him and he made no answer to the call. Shortly after this a negro man who was employed cutting wood on the lot arrived and took his little boy down to the barn to show him where to store the wood as he cut it up. Upon opening the barn door he was confronted with the lifeless body of the unfortunate man. He had climbed to the top of the house, tied one end of the rope to the rafters, and having fixed the other securely, dropped from the top and broke his neck. It is thought that death was almost instantaneous, but that he had been hanging twenty or thirty minutes when found. The news spread rapidly, and in a short time the coroner's jury had been impaneled. After an investigation they returned a verdict in accordance with the facts above stated. Ever since 1840 Judge James A. Welch has occupied a prominent position in this country, and exerted a strong influence over her people. In that year he came to New York and began to edit a paper called "The Transcript," and from that year to 1880, when he sold out his interest in the editorial chair he has been connected with journalism here. As a man, and as an editor he was always actuated by the highest and most honorable motives and has left the impress of his character upon the people among whom for forty-one years he has lived, and by whom he was regarded as an upright, honorable and worthy citizen. The cause of the rash act which has brought such sorrow to a hitherto happy family remains a mystery. Some cause there is, that we know, and yet it seems not enough to have caused such a step by one so cool, cautious and deliberate as he always was. Since selling his interest in the Herald he has been out of business, except to look after a small farm near by. In consequence of this he has been financially embarrassed. On yesterday a note for twelve hundred dollars fell due and he had been unable to raise the funds to meet it. For weeks he has been greatly depressed in spirits and seemed to have lost his smooth disposition and happy humor which had always characterized him. He had not of a business which would have kept his thoughts diverted from his troubles. It is thought that they preyed upon his mind until he was beside himself, and that he took his life when his mind had become impaired. He had very pretty property here and a great deal more than enough to cover his indebtedness, but it could not be readily converted into money for its full value. He gave no explanation himself of what he has done. Some think that the blank and account book which he took to the barn was taken with intent to write in it an explanation of his conduct, while others think he was taking it as an indication that it was his indecision that was weighing heavily upon his mind. His family had noticed his unusual and peculiar conduct some time, and are thoroughly satisfied that his mind was impaired. The deceased was about sixty years of age, and leaves a wife and three children at home—one son and two daughters—two sons in Texas, one in Louisiana, and two granddaughters living here. Nothing has occurred here in years which has been more universally and more deeply regretted.

DECATUR, December 21.—The Baptist Sunday-school will have an interesting exercises Christmas day. An address on "Christmas day" by Rev. M. W. Sams, on temperance by James G. Thayer, on science and responsive services. On Monday night Rev. Thomas C. Boykin will give an exhibition of his stereoscopic, and the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday-schools of Decatur, and Kirkwood Sunday-school have been invited to witness at the Baptist church. The first session on the Atlanta and Decatur street railroad was held at Decatur, and has been named Houston in honor of W. J. Houston. B. F. Veal, of Stone Mountain, and G. A. Ramspeck, of Decatur, are spoken of as possible "dark horses" for legislative honors. One of our merchants is known as "sweet" coffee. The demand for dwelling houses exceeds the supply. The possum market is excited owing to a "corner" on them.

CANTON, December 20.—Mr. Webster and wife, of Connecticut, and several others, are visiting Colonel H. C. Kellogg, of this place. They are just from the exposition and expressed themselves highly pleased. Captain W. Whitmore, our present very efficient hotel keeper, gives us to understand that, of our town, the first of next year, who intends running it.—Rev. M. B. Tugdale takes charge of the post-office at this place next Monday. A brilliant wedding is to take place at the Methodist church to-morrow evening. Will give a full account in my next.

MORRIS, December 21.—At 10 o'clock this morning Colonel John H. Keller, who is married to Miss Clara A. Knox, only daughter of George W. Knox, of Social Circle. Mr. Keller is a young man, having been married to Miss Keller, who is a daughter of her father and accomplished. The happy pair left on a trip to Savannah. Mrs. C. W. Brooks, of this county, has been adjudged a lunatic and was sent to the asylum to-day.—Numbers of our people go to the exposition every day.

What the Papers Say.

Rev. Sam. Jones, during conference, was out in the audience taking up a collection. He approached an old man who, by the way, was a regular hard case, and asked him: "My friend, don't you want to give a dollar to the Lord?" "I believe I do," said the old man. "Well, put it in my hat." "I guess I'll see the Lord before you do and I will give it to him," said the old man. Mr. Jones went back to the pulpit and asked Brother Brown to lead in prayer.

Columbus Times

On Saturday about 11 o'clock the dwelling of Dougherty Harris on the Chattahoochee plantation of G. E. Thomas, of this city, near Cottage Mills, was discovered to be on fire and the alarm given, but before help could arrive the fire had made such headway that it could not be checked. Two little negro children, grandchildren of Dougherty, were locked up in the house and perished in the flames. This thing has become so common that we seldom hear of the burning of a negro house but that there are two or three children in it. Will they never take warning?

An Enthusiastic Indorsement.
GOSHAM, N. H., July 14, 1879.
Gents—Whoever you are, I don't know; but I think the Lord and feel grateful to you to know that in this world of adulterated medicines there is one compound that proves and does it all it advertises to do, and more. Four years ago I had a slight case of palsy, which unnerved me to such an extent that the least excitement would make me shake like the ague. Last May I was induced to try Hop Bitters. I used one bottle, but did not see any change; another did so change my nerves that I am now as steady as they ever were. It used to take both hands to write, but now I can write right and writes this. Now, if you continue to manufacture as honest and good an article as you do, you will accumulate an honest fortune, and confer the greatest blessing on your fellow men that was ever conferred on mankind. PERSONALS.

Dr. William Crenshaw has returned to the city. Among the visitors to the city is William Mahone Jr., son of the great Virginia leader.

Miss Annie, the charming daughter of Colonel J. H. Nichols, of Nacoochee, is at the Kimball.

Governor Colquhoun is expected home to-day from a hurried business trip to New York.

R. H. Bandle, of Lithonia, passed through the city yesterday en route to Jacksonville, Fla., where he will spend some time.

Miss Stacie Pison, one of Georgia's most beautiful and accomplished young ladies, is visiting the Misses Hornady, 172 Ivy street.

Ex-Governor Johnson, of North Carolina, is a visitor to the exposition, and has a competent chaperone in Colonel R. J. Griffin, of this city.

Ex-Governor G. F. Drew, of Florida, is making a thorough inspection of the exposition, and pronounces upon it a glowing eulogy.

Hon. J. E. Burke, of Charleston, South Carolina, the distinguished South Carolina jurist, is visiting his brother, W. B. Burke, Cooper street.

If Mr. William Swan, of Poughkeepsie, New York, is in the city, he will please send his address to 322 Peachtree street.

General A. R. Lawton is in the city on his return from a meeting of the executive committee of the National bar association, held in Washington city.

Ed Mercer, of this city, has been presented by Hamilton Diston, of Philadelphia, with a large body of the best land in the immense Diston pure chase in Florida.

Mrs. D. E. Trent, of Lynchburg, Va., who has been spending several months with her son, has returned home, much to the regret of the many friends she made while here.

Colonel Francis M. Paul, the clever and able assistant to Colonel Kilbreth at the exposition, was the former editor and proprietor of the famous newspaper, "The Chattanooga Rebel."

Colonel W. F. Wilkinson, editor of the Southern Patriot at Prattville, Ala., is in the city. He is one of the vigorous young men of Alabama who have practical ideas on the subject of southern progress.

The Governor's office had a call yesterday from Mr. E. W. B. Willey, son, and business manager of Mr. John A. Willey, proprietor of the well known and popular Grand Central hotel, Columbia, South Carolina.

Mr. Charles Lincoln, who successfully conducted the recent bench show, returned yesterday to his home in Detroit. He made his friends during his stay with us, and we wish him success wherever he may go.

Married.
HIGHTOWER—HAYDEN—At the residence of the bride's parents, Judge and Mrs. J. A. Hayden, near Sandy Springs, Ga., by Rev. W. R. Kelly, on Wednesday morning, December 14, 1881, Mr. Harry H. Hightower, of Atlanta, Georgia, and Miss Julia Hayden, of Orange County, Florida, were united in marriage.

The happy couple left on the steamer Delmar at 9 o'clock on the same morning for Atlanta, accompanied by the well wishes of a host of friends.

We clip the above from the South Florida Journal. Mr. Hightower is a popular and promising young business man, and is a son of Mr. H. H. Hightower, one of our leading merchants. Miss Julia is a great favorite with her many friends. They were the recipients of many elegant presents.

There is now no excuse for using hog's lard. Refined cotton seed oil is a pure vegetable oil—whole some and durable. It is better for health and for cooking than lard, not scorching so easily. It is good as butter for cake. It is much cheaper. Real price 75 cents per gallon or 10 cents per pound. One pound goes much farther than a pound of lard. There are 7 1/2 pounds of oil in a gallon, which, at 75 cents per gallon, would be 56 cents per pound. Two thirds of a pound of the oil is equivalent to a pound of lard. To secure a pure article buy of Hope oil mill, Memphis, branded Hope Oil. G. W. SCOTT & CO., Agents, Atlanta. dec22-dtf
